With the peace process at a critical stage, three members of Queen's University explore the constitutional question and ask if the people of Northern Ireland can give shape to their own political destiny.

Colin Irwin reports on their findings of research.

NORTHERN IRELAND’S FUTURE IS PUT UNDER THE MICROSCOPE BY ACADEMICS

ULSTER PEOPLE COULD DECIDE WAY FORWARD

The survey asked a random sample of the Northern Ireland population to put eight options for the political development of Northern Ireland in their order of preference.

The politicians could be asked to put the will of the people into practice

With the experience of the polls established, the people of Northern Ireland could be asked to put their own wishes into practice through some kind of referendum. As a last resort, the politicians could be asked to put the will of the people into practice.

The survey asked a random sample of the Northern Ireland population to put eight options for the political development of Northern Ireland in their order of preference.

Shop Inn Style

Explore the vast array of Irish shops that are featured in the new edition of 'Irish Country Style', which has hit the shelves in time for St. Patrick's Day. The book is now available at selected retailers and online.

Central Bank

The Central Bank of Ireland has announced that the new €5 banknote will be available from 1 March 2023. The banknotes feature the image of the late Irish poet Seamus Heaney and will be printed in Ireland by De La Rue.