ULSTER PARADES

‘Fair trial was impossible in bandhall case’

By Chris Thornton

A FAIR trial was impossible for a member of the Ballymoney and Ballyclare area of the Nationalist movement because he has a death penalty hanging over his head. The member of Ulster Volunteer Force (UVF) was dealt with without a trial even though the case had gone to the High Court.

Mr. Cusack, a member of the UVF, was charged with the murder of a police officer in the same area. The trial was not only a miscarriage of justice but also an insult to the community. The member was acquitted of the charge and given bail to await further proceedings.

The UVF, which is a Protestant paramilitary group, said they would not take any action against the member until the trial was completed. The UVF has been involved in a number of paramilitary activities in the North.

In a separate development, a member of the British Army was arrested for allegedly planning an attack on the UVF. The member was accused of plotting to kill a number of UVF members.

£50m waste plant rapped

By Neil McIlmure

A £50m waste incineration plant in Ballymena could cause environmental problems, the Environment Agency has said. The agency said the plant is not fit for purpose and that it poses a significant risk to the environment.

The plant was built in 1995 and is run by Ballymena Borough Council. The council said it was not aware of any problems with the plant and that it was operating within its capacity.

The Environment Agency said the plant was not designed to deal with the amount of waste it was being asked to handle and that it was not equipped to deal with the variety of waste materials it was receiving.

The agency warned that the plant could cause air pollution and that it could release harmful substances into the environment.

Mayhew visits St Enoch

By Claire McKeown

Mr. Mayhew, who was described as a 'hero' by his parishioners, was attacked by a group of men on the evening of 1st August. The attack took place in the grounds of the church and was witnessed by a number of people.

The attack was described as 'vicious' and 'brutal' by witnesses and the church was set on fire. The attack was carried out by a group of men who were seen running off in various directions.

The attack was described as 'brutal' and 'vicious' by the church community. The church was damaged in the attack and the cost of repairs is estimated to be around £3m.

IRA claims Aintree

The IRA claimed responsibility for the attack on the church. The group said it was a protest against the British government’s policies in the North.

The IRA said it would continue to carry out attacks until the British government changed its policies in the North. The group said it was a response to the government’s policy of 'normalisation'.

The IRA said it was doubling its activities in the North and that it would carry out more attacks in the future.
