How can anyone have confidence in Mowlam?

IT never ceases to amaze how some of the most controversial issues can remain taboo for so long. One such taboo is the question of control of immigration. It has long been recognised that without it, many of the other problems facing the country cannot be addressed.

The government has been slow to act, and its measures have been weak. The Home Office has been underfunded and understaffed, and the immigration service has been chaotic.

The government's response to this has been to increase immigration, not reduce it. This has only led to an increase in the problem.

We need a strong, effective immigration policy that will help us to address some of the most pressing problems facing the country.

AN open letter to Mr. John Selwyn Gummer, Minister for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs

Dear Mr. Gummer,

I am writing to express my concern about the recent government proposals for the relaxation of planning regulations. I believe that these proposals are dangerously flawed and will have a negative impact on the environment and the quality of life in our communities.

As an environmentalist, I have always been concerned about the environment and the impact that human activity has on the planet. I have seen firsthand the consequences of neglecting our environment and the damage that can be done to our planet.

I would like to remind you of the importance of the planning system in protecting our environment and ensuring that new developments are sustainable and do not harm the environment.

I urge you to reconsider the proposals for the relaxation of planning regulations and to work with stakeholders to ensure that any changes made are in the best interests of the environment.

Yours sincerely,
