65% STILL FOR DEAL

But Protestant vote is divided

SIXTH five per cent of people in Northern Ireland would vote Yes in a new referendum for the Good Friday Agreement, a major opinion poll reveals today.

More than 70% of Protestants will vote Yes, the survey shows.

But a narrow majority of Catholics will vote No.

The poll of 1,500 voters, commissioned by North West Radio, shows that 65% of Catholics oppose the Agreement.

A third of the Protestant population has declared itself opposed to the Agreement.

The poll, carried out by NOP, suggests that if the Agreement was put to the people, the majority of voters would say No.

Carried out between October 7 and October 9, the poll of 1,500 voters included a detailed analysis of the Agreement's support in each of the six counties.

£250m plan for city

Knife man strikes twice on campus

By Maureen Coleman

STUDENTS in Jordanstown University are being encouraged to be vigilant after a man was attacked on two occasions.

The attacks, which occurred at different times and locations on campus, are said to have been committed by the same individual.

The first attack took place on a bus, where the attacker allegedly approached the victim and demanded money.

The second attack occurred in a dormitory, where the attacker allegedly entered the room and threatened to kill anyone who tried to intervene.

The university has taken steps to increase security measures, including the deployment of additional security personnel and the installation of new surveillance cameras.

The police investigation is ongoing, and the university is working closely with law enforcement to ensure the safety of students and staff.
