Jill Dando murder: man held

"I gave a big whoop of joy. Twelve months I've waited for a message like this. It's just terrific. But suppose it all held together for a day. I'm highly elated but at the same time a bit cautious because we've been here before, with arresting someone and then releasing them without charge."

Jill Dando's father, Jack

---

Ulster house prices soar

By Marcus Wilke

Northern Ireland's house price index has reached an all-time high - but property prices across the province are escalating rapidly.

Although the Bank of England's Bank's Northern Ireland Quarterly Report, published yesterday, showed that the index for the first quarter of 2000 showed a major surge (17.3%) in house values in overall terms of inflation, the Irish Times, there were rises.

---

QUB anger at guide IRA 'elur'

By Chris Thorpe

QUlber's University is to launch a new guide for Gaelic games for students who are looking to get a degree in Irish as a major subject.

The guide is aimed at providing research funding for students who are interested in the study of Irish literature, history, culture, and society.

The university will release a new edition of the guide in the coming weeks, which will include information on the different courses and programmes available for students interested in Irish studies.

The new guide will provide students with access to a wide range of resources, including books, journals, and online databases, which will enable them to gain a deeper understanding of the subject.

---

INSIDE TODAY

FAMILY NOTICES

P20-21

TV AND RADIO

P30-31

LETTERS

P15

BUSINESS

P17

VIEWPOINT

P18

CROSSWORD

P19

STEVEN KING

P20

DESMOND MCCARTAN

P19

SPORT

P22-26

TELETWI P27-40

JANE BELL

P33

RUTHERFORD

P34-39

GRANTS

P43-49

STATEMENTS

P49

ULSTER IN FOCUS

P49

---

Homefinder

£1,000 of carpet

WIN!

---

Oil prices up by over 50% in the last year.

---

Unionists in swing to Agreement says poll

By Chris Thorpe

For the latest issues of Northern Ireland's leading political and business newspapers, the Unionist swing to the Agreement is said to have reached an all-time high.

The Unionist swing to the Agreement is said to have reached an all-time high, with the Unionist vote increasing by 13% in the last general election, according to the Queen's University of Belfast's School of Politics and International Relations.

The Swing to the Agreement is said to have reached an all-time high, with the Unionist vote increasing by 13% in the last general election, according to the Queen's University of Belfast's School of Politics and International Relations.

Unionists in swing to Agreement says poll

By Chris Thorpe

The Unionist swing to the Agreement is said to have reached an all-time high, with the Unionist vote increasing by 13% in the last general election, according to the Queen's University of Belfast's School of Politics and International Relations.

The Swing to the Agreement is said to have reached an all-time high, with the Unionist vote increasing by 13% in the last general election, according to the Queen's University of Belfast's School of Politics and International Relations.

For the latest issues of Northern Ireland's leading political and business newspapers, the Unionist swing to the Agreement is said to have reached an all-time high.